His heart was in desperate need of a nail
If only for one brief moment
I caught a glimpse
But do I look further?
But do I look further?

Every leap year it's always the same
He's hiding amongst all the mourners
I saw his face
But do I look further?
But do I look further?

Falling down, but I just don't feel a thing
But I just don't feel a thing and I don't know why
Can you tell me why
I got no remorse

The lights went out as he walked through the marsh
Kicking the gas lamp over
Is that his face?
But do I look further?
And do I look further?

Cowering silhouette on the wall
Lying away his murder
His doubled face
Why do I look further?
Why do I look further?

Falling down, but I just don't feel a thing
But I just don't feel a thing and I don't know why
Can you tell me why
I got no remorse

That's him in the ox-colored boots
Making his rounds
He's the one selling wilted bouquets

At the foot of forest lawn

Falling down, but I just don't feel a thing
But I just don't feel a thing and I don't know why
Can you tell me why

Falling down, but I just don't feel a thing
But I just don't feel a thing and I don't know why
Can you tell me why
I got no remorse
